CONCEPT NOTE

Sukladhwaj, popularly known as Mahabir Chilarai was the third son of Biswa Singha of the Koch dynasty of Kamata Kingdom. He was the Commander-in-chief of King Nara Narayana and earned his name as Chilarai because of his quick movements and prompt action. He learnt and mastered the art of warfare very well. Chilarai was also instrumental in providing shelter to Srimanta Sankardeva. He played a remarkable role in expanding the Koch dynasty during Nara Narayan's reign. A master military strategist, his valour confirmed Koch supremacy over the North Eastern part of India. But at the same time Chilarai was kind enough towards his captivated kings and chiefs and treated them with respect. He even treated enemy prisoners with generosity and also gave them land-grants to settle. Adding to the glory of the Koch dynasty of Chilarai's time is the reconstruction of the Kamakhya temple of Guwahati by his brother King Nara Narayana in the year 1565.

The aim of this symposium is to create an awareness of the contributions of Mahabir Chilarai along with the Koch dynasty which has a great influence on the heritage, culture and social structures in this North-Eastern part of India.
