Importance of the event:

It is known to all that India is primarily an agrarian society and 80% of its population lives in villages. Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi said that India's soul resides in the villages and hence it is very important to see India through its lenses.

Unfortunately, however, the youth of today is gradually becoming alien to the idea of villages, its life, ways and customs. Owing to the fast-changing world and rapid advancements made in the field of science and technology, and the consequent race of people away from villages and towards the urbanization. And hence it is very crucial to try and ensure the youth are connected with their roots so as to in turn ensure the development of our rural areas and hence our country as a whole.

This programme organised by the Department of Political Science was thus an attempt to ensure the above-mentioned objective and to naturally develop in them a sense of respect for the farmers who are the reasons why we have food on our plates every day.
